RCAL Honors Its Founder and Celebrates 35 Years of Service

KINGSTON, NY -- In 1978, on a stretch of road, a drunk driver caused a head on collision that changed Joan Gundersen's life forever. Joan had two friends as passengers, one of whom escaped with minor injuries. The other, sadly, never made it home to her family. The accident, which nearly took Joan's life, had her trapped in the wreckage for several hours before being taken by ambulance.

Recuperation took more than a year in a hospital where Joan faced physical challenges that changed the direction of her life. Using her wheelchair, Joan was out to dinner with family, when their waitress completely ignored her while taking the family's order, and then asked a family member, "...and what will she have?" At that moment, Joan realized the many challenges she herself would face and decided she wanted to become an advocate for herself and others in the community. That decision led her to founding RCAL.

New York State was in its fourth year of the Independent Living Movement when Joan applied for, and won a grant in 1982 to establish the Resource Center for Accessible Living (RCAL), which was incorporated in 1983. It was one of the first Independent Living Centers (ILCs) established in New York.

This year we celebrate RCAL's 35th year of providing services to individuals with disabilities by assisting them with living more independently in their community. RCAL provides respite, community habilitation, support groups, representative payee services, benefits advisement, equipment loan closet, accessibility advisement, care management, special education advocacy, employment services, information, and referral.

RCAL honored Joan and celebrated its 35th Anniversary at its First Annual Founder's Celebration held on Thursday, October 25, 2018 at Ole Savannah in Kingston, New York. Photo collage of the evening's event (on page 2) includes RCAL's Board of Directors, staff, friends, family, and supporters of RCAL.

Introducing Doug!

Jaime Bunt our Disability Awareness Instructor and Peer Advocate was matched with her second Seeing Eye Dog, Doug a two-years-old black lab, on July 25, 2018. Jaime and Doug returned to RCAL in August after two and a half weeks of bonding and training at the Seeing Eye in Morristown NJ. Doug is spunky and energetic with a sweet disposition. Doug enjoys his job as a Seeing Eye Dog especially working outdoors and getting to explore new places. When he is not working he loves carrying around stuffed toys, playing fetch and running around outside with Jonas (Jaime's retired Seeing Eye Dog).

RCAL was very happy to welcome Thomas Buboltz as a summer intern. Thomas came to RCAL as an intern through the Northeastern Association of the Blind in Albany (NABA). During his internship here at RCAL, Thomas worked diligently to scan our archived materials into digital format so that they can be accessed and stored in a more efficient way. Thomas was also able to read much of the archived articles to gain a broad understanding of RCAL's history and the motivation behind its founding in 1983. Thank you Thomas for all your hard work!

Thomas shared some of his own experience and related it to RCAL's desire that all individuals, whether they have a disability or not, should be able to live independently in their own communities and be free to make their own choices.

Thomas' experience:

During the summer after I finished 6th grade I had to have major spine surgery due to a 13 degree curve in my spine. I was born with reverse scoliosis. My doctor said if I didn't have the operation I would spend the rest of my life in a wheelchair due to the damage to my nervous system. I now live with two titanium rods in my back. One rod runs down the back of my neck to the end of my spine. The other rod gives my spine support on the right side. The surgery was risky, but I took that chance to prevent having to be in a wheelchair. When the operation was over and I woke up a few hours later, I was told I wouldn't be able to walk for a few weeks. I stayed hospitalized and in a wheelchair for 6 weeks. By the time I left the hospital, I recovered enough to walk. No one asks to have a disability but, neither did I ask to be legally blind either. My blindness is also a struggle, but I manage to keep my independence. Because of my experience, I can relate to RCAL's founder, Joan Gundersen, and her desire to create a community where people can live more independently. What I'm trying to say is no matter what disability a person has we all need to learn to accept each other and work together to maintain our independence.

Worried about your child's progress at school?

What are your parental rights with regards to your child's education?

What are your school district's responsibilities and mandates?

What if you disagree with district's recommendation for your child?

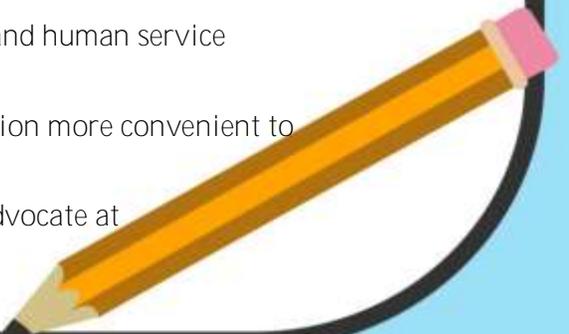

Do you know how to access and utilize NYSED regulations?

A child's greatest advocate is his/her parent. You are their first teacher and know your child best. When it comes to advocating in the school environment under the umbrella of special education, there are somethings every parent should know. Helping parents, and professionals, understand the student's rights is the goal of this workshop.

RCAL strongly encourages all parents to take this workshop whether for the first time or as a review. Going forth, all new parents seeking special education advocacy will be required to take this workshop.

Feel free to share with your child's PTA, other parents and anyone you feel may benefit from this workshop.

- Pre-registration is required. As we are a not-for-profit agency, RCAL requests a $5.00 donation to cover cost of workshop materials.
- The workshops are designed for parents, educators, and human service professionals.
- Workshops may also be scheduled and held at a location more convenient to specific groups of participants.

ACB Applauds House on Final Passage of Marrakesh Treaty

WASHINGTON (Sept. 26, 2018) — The American Council of the Blind applauds the U.S. House of representatives after passage of the Marrakesh Treaty Implementation Act (S. 2559) late Tuesday evening. The House vote moves the implementing legislation to the President's desk for signage, and the treaty to the State Department for final preparation of the diplomatic papers allowing the U.S. to become one of the official Marrakesh countries committed to the expanded availability of accessible published works from around the world.

"We're excited that Congress was able to move Marrakesh over the legislative finish line during its final days of business before leaving for the October recess," said ACB President Kim Charlson. "But what is most exciting is that U.S. citizens who are blind or have other print disabilities will soon be able to have access to special format materials available in other countries in English and other languages, as well as people with all types of print disabilities around the world who will soon be able to gain access to American published works for the first time in an accessible format."

The Marrakesh Treaty was the product of years of deliberations between the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO), publishers, libraries, and disability rights advocates. The treaty was a response to the grave concerns over the cumbersome international copyright laws that make it difficult to gain access to published works in accessible formats like braille or audio format.

The act, which was brought to the House floor by Rep. Bob Goodlatte, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, amends U.S. copyright law necessary for full implementation of the treaty. Hearing no objection, the legislation passed with unanimous consent.

"We've had countless numbers of advocates who have helped make this treaty a reality in the United States," said ACB Executive Director Eric Bridges.

"We wish to thank the U.S. Congress, particularly House Chairman Goodlatte and Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Bob Corker for showing true leadership by shepherding this treaty through the legislative channels."

The American Council of the Blind is a national grassroots consumer organization representing Americans who are blind and visually impaired. With 70 affiliates, ACB strives to increase the independence, security, equality of opportunity, and to improve quality of life for all blind and visually impaired people. Together, we make a bright future. Learn more by visiting www.acb.org.

Come join us for our delightful and diverse buffet!

Last week more than 150 members of Congress launched a new group focused on expanding and preserving Social Security benefits for seniors, people with disabilities, and their families. The Expand Social Security Caucus was co-founded by Senators Elizabeth Warren (D-MA) and Bernie Sanders (I-VT), and Representatives John Larson (D-CT), Debbie Dingell (D-MI) and Conor Lamb (D-PA) in the House. It is an exciting development in the effort to push for a Social Security program that truly meets the needs of the millions of seniors, people with disabilities, and families, who depend on their benefits to pay for housing, food, medicine, and other basic necessities.

The members of the caucus highlighted the importance of Social Security for the 63 million individuals currently receiving benefits. According to the Supplemental Poverty Measure from the U.S. Census, Social Security lifted 27 million people out of poverty in 2017, including 17 million seniors age 65 and over. The caucus is focused on promoting the idea that our country should be expanding Social Security, rather than limiting or cutting it, because of the critical role the program plays in allowing people to retire in dignity, and allowing families to stay afloat financially in case of a working family member's disability or death.

Unfortunately, the current administration, rather than protecting or expanding the program, proposed earlier this year to cut Social Security benefits by $72 billion over a 10-year period. There have also been efforts to cut the Social Security benefits of working families by using those benefits to pay for family leave. These kinds of attacks mean that the caucus must not only push to expand Social Security, but also fight to defend it against efforts to dismantle or weaken the program. There is real hope that their efforts will pay off, however. There are already a number of proposals in Congress that would expand Social Security, such as Rep. Larson's Social Security 2100 Act, which already has 174 Democratic co-sponsors. The support of the caucus and other members of Congress who are committed to preserving and expanding Social Security is key to ensuring that the program provides for both current and future generations of seniors and families.

Justice in Aging is a national non-profit legal advocacy organization that fights senior poverty through law. Formerly the National Senior Citizens Law Center, since 1972 we've worked for access to affordable health care and economic security for older adults with limited resources, focusing especially on populations that have traditionally lacked legal protection such as women, people of color, LGBT individuals, and people with limited English proficiency. Through targeted advocacy, litigation, and the trainings and resources we provide to local advocates, we ensure access to the social safety net programs that poor seniors depend on, including Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, and Supplemental Security Income (SSI).
